Carbondale's Casey may become Major Gen.

Brig. General Aloysius G. Casey

Brigadier General Aloysius G. Casey, commander of the Ballistic Missile Office, Norton Air Force Base, Calif., was recently nominated for promotion to Major General by President Reagan. General Casey's promotion will be finalized when it is approved by the U.S. Senate in the next few months. General Casey will pin on his new rank sometime next year.

General Casey is responsible for managing the research, design, development and acquisition of Department of Defense ballistic missile systems. These systems include the Peacekeeper (M-X) intercontinental ballistic missile (ICBM) development program, the Small ICBM Program, Minuteman force imporvements and advanced strategic missile systems.

General Casey was born March 1, 1932, in Carbondale where he graduated from St. Rose High School in 1949. After one year at the University of Scranton, Pa., he entered the U.S. Naval Academy, Annapolis, Md., graduating with a bachelor of science degree in engineering in 1954. In 1964 he received a master of science degree in astronautics at the Air Force Institute of Technology, Wright-Patterson Air Force Base, Ohio.

In October 1976, after numerous operational and research and development assignments, General Casey was assigned as assistant deputy for the Peacekeeper missile system and in October 1979, he became the Peacekeeper program manager. During his tour of duty as Peacekeeper program manager, the system moved from advanced development into full scale engineering development. He assumed his present duties as the BMO Commander in May 1982.

The general is a master navigator with more than 3,000 flying hours. His military decorations and awards include the Legion of Merit, with two oak leaf clusters, Distinguished Flying Cross, Air Medal with nine oak leaf clusters and Air Force Commendation Medal with one oal leaf cluster.

General Casey is married to the former Patricia Casey of Washington, D.C. They have three sons: Matthew, Joseph and Patrick.

New Army recruiter returns to "adopted" hometown

By MIKE PETROVSKY

Army recruiter Sergeant Thomas F. Mumford Jr., 64 Brook Street, has been recently assigned to the Honesdale-Carbondale recruiting station, at 16 Sixth Avenue.

The new recruiter's territory includes Carbondale Area, Lakeland, Western Wayne and Forest City school districts. Mumford worked a year and a half as a recruiter in Lebanon, PA, before the same type of position opened up in Carbondale. He calls Carbondale his adopted hometown because he spent part of his childhood here and after he moved he often returned to visit relatives. Mumford is the son of former Carbondale residents Army Commander Thomas and Lucetta Mumford, now living in Alameda, California, and the grandson of Robert and Mary Ashby, 9 Lunny Court.

Mumford, his wife Cheryl and their two sons, Thomas and Steven, share a two-family home with his brother, Randy L. Mumford, 66 Brook Street. His brother, a local contractor, renovated the home which belongs to their father.

Thomas F. Mumford

Mumford began his Army career as a military traffic and criminal investigator and is impressed by Carbondale's relatively low crime rate compared to other places he has been stationed. He said that in Monterey, California, where he was a military narcotics investigator at Fort Ord, crime was so bad that soda machines were enclosed by wire mesh so they couldn't be burglarized.

Having spend eight years in the Army and reenlisting for six more last week, Mumford is as enthusiastic about being an Army recruiter as he is about living in Carbondale. Mumford said that anyone considering career in the Army should come and see him now because the Army has many new programs.

"We could do just about anything," Mumford said. "We're teaching people civilian skills and we don't ask for experience." Despite the Army's nationwide advertising campaigns there are still people who don't know with the Army has to offer, according to Mumford.

YMCA fitness classes slated

Christmastime means weight-gain time for most of us. Who can resist all the cookies, candies and egg nog? The Carbondale YMCA would like to invite everyone to join a fitness class at the Y that will fit into their busy schedules. The Dawn Patrol meets Monday, Wednesday and Friday mornings at 6:45 a.m. for the early-risers. For those who perfer to have the sun get up before they do, there is a 9:30 a.m. fitness class, also on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays. Rather exercise after work or school? Then try the 4:45 p.m. class on Monday and Wednesday afternoons. Ladies only may choose to exercise Tuesday and Thursday evenings at 6:30 p.m., and Senior Citizens exercise Monday, Wednesday and Friday mornings at 11:15 a.m.

Taylor completes training

Army National Guard Pvt. Brian R. Taylor, son of Robert B. and Barbara S. Taylor of 47 Spring St., has completed one station unit training (OSUT) at the U.S. Army Infantry School, Fore Benning, Ga.

OSUT is a 12-week period which combines basic combat training and advanced individual training.

The training included weapons qualifications, squad tactics, patrolling, landmine warfare, field communications and combat operations. Completion of this course qualifies the soldier as a light-weapons infantryman and as an indirect-fire crewman.

Soldiers were taught to perform any of the duties in a rifle or mortar squad.

He is a 1977 graduate of Carbondale Area High School.
